In a sunny castle lived a little princess named Poppy.
Poppy loved twirling, singing, and strawberry cake.

In the garden lived Pippa, the tiniest fairy.
Pippa’s wings went flutter-flutter, and she sprinkled sparkles everywhere.

In the meadow lived Bramble, a baby dragon.
Bramble tried to breathe fire… but only glitter came out.
“Achoo!”

“Your fire is hiding,” said Poppy.
“We’ll help you find it!”
So the three friends set off together.

They tiptoed through the Whispering Meadow,
where the flowers swayed and whispered,
“This way! This way!”

They crossed the Giggling Brook on a wobbly log.
The water giggled, “Hee-hee! Careful!”

They wandered into the Tickly Forest.
The leaves tickled Bramble’s nose.
“Achoo!” went Bramble. Glitter everywhere!

They climbed the Sleepy Mountain,
step by sleepy step,
all the way to the very top.

At the top grew a Moonberry bush, glowing soft and blue.
On it shone one big Starberry.
“That’s it!” cheered Pippa.

Poppy picked the Starberry and they shared it — one bite for Poppy, one bite for Pippa, one bite for Bramble.

Bramble’s tummy felt warm and glowy.
He took a deep breath…
and out came the coziest little flame!
They toasted marshmallows.

That night, under a blanket of stars, the three friends snuggled close. “Best friends forever,” they whispered.
